D. Frederick Wertz came to Lycoming College as its 9th President in July of 1955.

*The Campus covered 24 acres and had 10 buildings.
Ground was broken for Wesley Hall on Inauguration Day.*

*Thirteen years later,
the campus presented an entirely different picture as seen in the aerial view above taken last summer.
The college now has 32 acres of Campus, including the Athletic field located on Lincoln Avenue,
and has 21 buildings.*

The inauguration, on November 11, 1955, was an event to be remembered. The late Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam presided and Bishop John Wesley Lord gave the address. Dr. John W. Long, retiring President wishes the new president well as the Honorable Robert F. Rich, Chairman of the College Board of Directors and Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam look on in this picture taken in 1955.

During his thirteen years at the college, D. Frederick Wertz transformed the campus by erecting 13 new buildings in that short period of time. The president was responsible for helping to design the new buildings by explaining the needs of the College to the architect and the members of the Board.

D. Frederick Wertz was a destructive president . . . buildings adjacent to the campus were razed to make room for the new buildings . . .

... but he was also very constructive. He views the start of North Hall with Mr. Robert Rich. One of the major jobs of the president was to help raise money for the expansion of the institution. He spoke for the college in his personal contacts with individuals and by playing a major role in capitol campaigns. President Wertz lived by the newspaper headline, "Local College Must Expand!"

*For many students, their first introduction to the president came as he addressed one of the orientation sessions for freshmen and their parents.
The student body came to know him in many different capacities.*

As an administrator . . .

As a counselor

As a friend . . .

*He was enthusiastic about student activities and became involved in spite of his busy schedule.
He encouraged school spirit.
He encouraged scholars . . .
He was an avid sports fan . . .*

He recognized faculty accomplishments . . .

He entertained visiting dignitaries . . .

*Former Governor Leader

*The late

*Former Governor Scranton

*The Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman,

*His Worship, the Mayor of Southport, England—

*President Wertz
will best be remembered by those who graduated from 1956 through 1968 as he led the commencement procession . . .
and for his warm words
of congratulations
as he handed them their diploma.*

*As a Bishop
in the United Methodist Church,
D. Frederick Wertz
will continue to point the way for children, youth and adults in an attempt to show them

He was elected a Bishop on July 26, 1968.

That same evening the Executive Board of the Alumni Association held a meeting on Campus and sent the following telegram to him in West Virginia.

"Be it resolved that the Alumni Association of Lycoming College holds in high regard the work of Dr. D. Frederick Wertz who served Lycoming College as its President for the past 13 years.

The Association recognizes that the growth of the College physically and in its academic excellence has been due to his deep dedication and untiring efforts.

Many alumni will remember not only his outstanding work as an administrator, but will also recall the close personal relationship which he maintained with the student body.

Although we will receive the news of his resignation with a sense of deep loss, it is with great pride that we congratulate him on his election and wish him continued success in his newly appointed post as a Bishop in the United Methodist Church.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Alumni Association pledges its support to the College Board of Directors as it considers a new President for Lycoming College.

Alumnus Heads Military Education Program

Colonel Marshall E. Sanders was assigned to the Air Force Institute of Technology as Deputy Commandant in June 1967. This assignment followed four years of duty in the Pentagon with the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs as Policy and Special Projects Division Chief in the Policy Planning Staff. In his new position he is responsible for a wide variety of activities roughly comparable to those of a civilian university Vice President for Administration; and acts for the Commandant, a USAF Major General, in all matters during his absence. A brief statement of the mission, organization, and activities of the Air Force Institute of Technology follows:

The Air Force Institute of Technology, a component of Air University, dates back to 1919. AFIT, as it is better known, is a large complex university system serving the agencies of the Department of Defense, and particularly the Air Force. It is located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio.

The mission of AFIT is "To provide education and training to meet the requirements of the Air Force in scientific, technological, managerial, and other areas as directed by Headquarters, United States Air Force."

This educational mission is executed by giving college degree courses in residence; by directing the education of Air Force officers and airmen in college-credit courses in civilian institutions; and by sponsoring postgraduate, non-credit, continuing education courses in residence at Wright-Patterson and at other Air Force Bases.

The Commander of Air University has the authority to grant academic degrees for the AFIT program. This authority was given in an act of the 83rd Congress in 1954.

The Institute is fully accredited as an institution of higher education by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development.

By virtue of its degree-granting activity, AFIT is a member of the American Council on Education, the American Society for Engineering Education, the Council of Graduate Schools, and the Midwest Conference on Graduate Study and Research.

During 1967 more than 16,000 students were enrolled in AFIT taught or sponsored courses compared to the nine students that made up the first class back in 1919. The resident schools now have 200 faculty members compared to the one that first year.

The major operating divisions, schools, and centers of AFIT are the Admissions Division, Civilian Institutions Division, School of Engineering, School of Systems and Logistics, the Defense Weapons Systems Management Center, the Civil Engineering School, the Nuclear Engineering Center and a library system.

The Admissions Division evaluates the academic qualifications of officers and airmen applying for college degree work, provides guidance and counselling for candidates, participates in the selection of assignees, direct officers and airmen into programs for which they are qualified and for which a quota has been established by Headquarters Air Force, provides registrar services for the resident schools, and maintains a transcript repository for the Air Force. This repository now contains the academic records of approximately 85,000 Air Force officers and in a few years will cover all 130,000 officers in the Air Force.

During 1967 there were 814 students enrolled in the School of Engineering. All of the courses and cur-

Col. Marshall E. Sanders was graduated from the Williamsport Dickinson Seminary in 1934 and the Junior College in 1936. He is married to the former Thursa Bakley '36. Col. Sanders has also studied at Lingnan University, Canton, China, American Universities, Georgetown and Princeton. They live in Dayton, Ohio.

ricula here are tailored especially to meet Air Force scientific and technological educational requirements. B.S. through Ph.D. degrees are earned at this school and it ranks first in the nation in number of M.S. degrees granted in Aeronautical Engineering.

The School of Systems and Logistics provides educational programs for logistics officers and civilian personnel employed in logistics management. The two principal programs of the school are the Graduate Logistics Management Program, leading to an M.S. degree, and the Continuing Education Program which includes more than 30 courses, ranging in length from one to nine weeks.

The Civilian Institutions Division arranges and monitors educational programs at civilian colleges, universities, hospitals, and selected industries to meet specific Air Force requirements; and degree programs in management and engineering sciences conducted under contract by universities at the six Minuteman missile sites. Currently, it deals with 101 colleges and universities in this country and abroad, 165 other institutions, mostly hospitals, and 44 aerospace related industries. At any given time there are about 5,000 Air Force students enrolled in the programs of this Division at civilian institutions.

The Defense Weapons Systems Management Center, established at the request of the Department of Defense, is an inter-service organization. Its mission is to train and educate Department of Defense personnel to manage defense weapon and support systems programs. This course is of the postgraduate, non-degree, continuing-study type.

The Civil Engineering School serves as a focal point for the professional development and education of career officers and officer equivalent civilians in the civil engineering fields. It fulfills its mission through short courses, the publication of a journal, and other profession-oriented activities.

The Air Force Nuclear Engineering Center is a recent acquisition of the Institute. It is an Air Force-directed and Department of Defense-supported project, involving a 10 megawatt reactor. The Institute is responsible for the administration of this facility as a research, development, and engineering tool, and for integrating it into the Air Force R&D and educational community.

The Institute's library system supports the instruction and research requirements of the four resident schools and the six Minuteman Education Programs.

Old Main is Falling Down!

The contract calls for Old Main to be razed during the Christmas recess this year, but she is a proud structure. Rather than to let the wrecking crew strike the first blow, she has begun to dismantle herself. A few days ago, a column of bricks on the southwest side came loose from the rest of the building and scattered on the ground. This spelled the beginning of the end for dear Old Main.

In the last issue of the Alumni Bulletin, Oliver Harris reported that we had had the building surveyed by competent architects and engineers, and they had advised us not to try to renovate it. The foundation structure is crumbling, the building has no steel framework in it, it's all wood beams, and the windows are in very poor condition, as is the wiring system. We would have to start by gutting the building, and in doing so, hope that the walls would not crumble before new steel beams could be built inside.

Construction costs on this kind of an operation would be very prohibitive. The building is not very workable now, as it was actually built in three sections and as Ollie says, "... it just sort of grew like Topsy." At the present time, the administration is using two floors for office space and the pigeons are occupying the rest. The administrative offices will soon be moved to the John W. Long Administrative Building which is nearing the completion of its renovations. Much sentiment is attached to Old Main and rightly so. It has been a good building.

The 1876 Winter Catalog of the Williamsport Dickinson Seminary gives the most accurate account of the construction of Old Main. In 1839, the town authorities sold the Williamsport Academy building located on West Street, then the western limits of the town to Mr. John B. Hall. With the proceeds, they purchased a lot and erected a building forty by sixty feet in size, two stories high. This is the west wing of Old Main. "On June 3, 1850 . . . The cornerstone of what now forms the east wing of the Seminary Buildings was laid with appropriate ceremonies . . . The following March it was finished at a cost of $10,000.00 and immediately occupied." This is the east wing of Old Main.

The 1876 catalog continues: "Four years later, the wings were joined by a building six stories high, thus completing a commanding edifice, substantially built of brick, furnished with modern improvements, capable of accommodating two hundred boarding students, and an equal number of day scholars, with apartments for the President, professors and employees, at a total cost of $42,575.08.

"In 1867, two stories were added to the west wing to make it correspond to the east wing, and so Old Main was finally complete. The building has remained substantially the same ever since."

After 130 years, Old Main will come down. True, many will be sorry to see her go, but she leaves a proud record of faithful service to the Academy, the Seminary, the Junior College and the College.

"A Chieftain of old, standing sentinel in the sun—Old Main guards the memory of battles lost and won, of our incantations, dedications, praising our warriors bold. Abidingly true, old friendships and new find worth in the bonds of Lycoming; long may her sachem proclaim her noble birth with high exaltation, we chant to her creation."

Mrs. E. E. McKelvey Observed Her 95th Birthday Anniversary

Observing her 95th birthday anniversary Wednesday, September 11, was Mrs. E. E. McKelvey, 316 North Montour Street, Montoursville. The widow of a Methodist minister, the borough resident claims the distinction of being one of Lycoming College's oldest living graduates. She was graduated from Dickinson Seminary, forerunner of the college, in 1897.

The former Eva Faus, Mrs. McKelvey is a native of Pine Twp. in Columbia County. She and her husband moved to Montoursville in 1935 when the latter retired from the active ministry in the Central Pennsylvania Annual Conference of the Methodist Church.

A graduate of Bloomsburg Normal School in 1892, Mrs. McKelvey was a school teacher in Columbia and Potter Counties before her marriage. Her husband served as pastor of Calvary Church in Williamsport from 1918 to 1922 and was the last minister to serve that congregation when it was still called Fourth Street Methodist Church.

In good health, the Montoursville woman is active in church work and is a member of the Montoursville United Methodist Church where she was a Sunday School teacher for many years. She has held various offices in the Woman's Society of Christian Service and is a past president of both the Lycoming County Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Montoursville WCTU.

During her early years as a student at Dickinson Seminary she studied art and on her 78th birthday her sons and daughters gave her paint supplies as gifts. Since that time, she has done many oils, mostly landscapes and still life, and has had a number of her works exhibited.

A daughter, two sons, and two grandchildren of the Montoursville resident are alumni of Lycoming College. The late Mrs. Walter Nowak, the former Helen McKelvey, was graduated with the class of 1920; the Rev. John Wesley McKelvey, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, Concord, N. H., is an alumnus; and Dr. Vincent E. McKelvey, who is with the Geological Survey of the Department of the Interior, Washington, is a graduate of the class of 1932. In addition two grandchildren received degrees in 1960.

Mrs. McKelvey has two other sons, Dr. Blake McKelvey, historian for the city of Rochester, N. Y., and Paul, who operates a motel near Pittsburgh; and two daughters, Mrs. Frances Holley, of Anna Marie Island, Florida; and Mrs. Rachel Cleaves, Haverford. She has seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Artist Peter Sawyer was chosen to do the series because of his unusually fine, free technique which has won him national recognition as an award-winning watercolorist.

Each full-color scene, measuring 11" x 14", matted, is individually rendered (NOT a printed reproduction) on the finest watercolor paper.

The very low price of $3.50 for each painting matted and ready for framing (only $12.50 if ordered in sets of four) is possible only as an introductory offer of the College Watercolor Group, a gathering of expert watercolorists who seek to create the widest possible appreciation for the medium of watercolors — and to introduce you, reacquaint you, or renew your delight in the marvelous, spontaneous, and refreshing world of watercolors.

So at a fraction of the actual value of this rare set, we make this initial offer—with full money-back return privileges. For a perfect gift to yourself—to alumni and friends alike—FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY, RETURN THE NO-OBLIGATION COUPON TODAY.
